2. Due to long term exposure to weather, unnecessary clutter might accumulate on the decks, walls, door etc. You must clear this waste as a prospective buyer would be more interested in purchasing a presentable home rather than second hand homes

3. You might need to revamp the windows, doors, carpets, ceilings and walls of your house along with keeping the interior of your house clean

4. A highly frequented area such as the kitchen and bathroom of your house usually undergoes a lot of wear and tear. Thus, such areas might require more cleaning and repairing. You should check whether the different appliances are working appropriately or not

5. You should familiarize yourself with different advertising and marketing techniques before putting up your house for sale. It might cost you money in case you overlook certain faults. In order to make an impression as a good and responsible seller, you need to take extra measures of rectifying obvious defects which can be exposed by a simple inspection.

6. Ask honest opinions from your neighbors as well as friends as to whether or not they would be inclined to purchase your house. Make an effort to remove anything that screams 'my personal space' and 'my personality'. Before a buyer comes to view your home, you should remove things like ornaments, pieces of unique art-work, photos etc.

7. You may intend to hire someone to thoroughly clean every nook and cranny and banish all dust bunnies. Replace stained or moderately worn carpet, doorknobs, kitchen cabinet hardware and any dated light fixtures. You can make a world of difference as all these activities can be done within a limited budget. A new, fresh smelling carpet would create a great impression on a prospective buyer. You can further add a wow factor by carefully selecting neutral colors to coat the walls of your rooms.

In order to advertise and put up your house for sale in suitable places, you may seek the services of a complete sales team or simply a real estate agent. Such an agent would highlight the unique aspects of your house to the prospective purchasers. You need to make all possible efforts of making your house presentable to sell it fast.
